Unpopular opinion: The 6th is not the day to start a civil war. Trump did not ask for us to do this. This is stupid. Please don't go to the rally with that being your intention.

posted 3 months ago by Redpillgirlfrommars +647 / -2

Let me be clear: I am not against a person protecting/defending themselves. I am talking specifically to the people who are saying that depending on which way it goes that day, it will be the start of the civil war, and Trump meant he wanted a civil war by saying "will be wild". That's not what he meant and starting a civil war at this rally is a terrible idea. I understand you're angry. Everyone is. But from what I have seen, it's very clear many of you have not thought this through and we need to stop this before it goes too far.

-The 6th is not the end of the line. We have until January 20th. Trump's legal team has been very clear about two things: 1. January 20th is the day to worry about, but even then, WORST case scenario is Pelosi sits in as president until this is sorted out. 2. They still have legal routes to take, and will pursue those. They hope to overturn the election through their legal paths, NOT through the insurrection act. Insurrection act is in the event they have exhausted all other options.

-January 6th is when congress certify the votes.

-The rally/protest on the 6th is meant to put pressure on congress to do the right thing.

-Trump saying "will be wild" is NOT some kind of secret code asking us to begin a civil war if things don't work in our favor on January 6th.

-Making this assumption and acting out on it is very, very, very stupid and very, very, very dangerous.

-The people on the don are a tiny fraction of Trump's supporters. While you guys are hyped up for a civil war, the rest of his supporters may not be.

There are several reasons to have complete confidence that a civil war is not what Trump intends/wants to happen on the 6th:

-Trump made a vague invitation to his supporters. Not specifically those who are well-armed/well-trained. He knows there will be numerous elderly people, handicapped/disabled people, women, families, children, etc attending the protest.

-Trump would not invite his supporters to what they believe is a rally/protest, only for him to turn around and say "Glad you guys made it! So we're actually starting a civil war that starts right now!". I don't know why you would want to start a war knowing your side is full of people who are not prepared/unable/unwilling to fight, many of which would be against their will, with zero warning. That is incredibly dangerous and, quite frankly, very stupid.

-We do not know who is attending this rally. Those who may be armed are not going to be in cahoots with every other person who is armed. You are going into this completely unorganized and with zero strategy, which is horrifically stupid.

-Having this rally be the first battle for Civil War II would result in excess loss of life on both sides. It is NOT FAIR to assume everyone around you is ready to die for their country like you are. In America, we let people choose to join the military. In the event that there is a draft, you would not be invited to a party and told to begin a war with ZERO training, ZERO knowledge of strategy, ZERO experience, NO means of defending yourself, etc. You would have knowledge beforehand and you would get some kind of training.

-Trump would NEVER ask for a civil war with the logistics.

-Setting a precedent where Trump using an adjective means "civil war starts now!" is a terrible idea. If you are intending to shed blood and put it on Trump you better have 100%, absolute confirmation that that was actually Trump's orders (NOT "but he said will be wild!! what else could that mean???"). If he has not said something to the tune of "those who are willing to fight for our freedom, please arm yourself and do xyz to join with our great military in defending the Republic from traitors", get the "omg we're going to war!" excitement out of your head so you don't do anything stupid.

-As stated, the 6th is not the end of the line. Starting a civil war right now would ONLY hurt Trump. I am sure if he knew this was your plan, he would beg you to stop. If this was the 20th and Trump is calling to mobilize people to fight, that's a different story.

-If Trump wanted something like this, he could call for the insurrection act in which case armed militias could be utilized.

-They specifically said they DO NOT WANT THE INSURRECTION ACT RIGHT NOW. They have other options. Let Trump take those routes.

Starting this on the 6th would NOT work in our favor. Trump would NOT be happy about it. This would throw a wrench in his entire plan and royally fuck everything up beyond repair. If you're going to do shit like this, wait until you know 100% for certain there is no other option (AFTER JANUARY 20). Again, I am not against anyone defending themselves against twig-armed leftists that beat people with bike locks, but that is ENTIRELY different from starting a war. After everything Trump has done for our country, do not fuck him over. Do not pull the rug out from under his feet. You wait for his call. His ACTUAL call, not some cryptic tweet you interpreted wrong and never got confirmation on.

▼ This. The last thing we want is to have to initiate a "war" after handing over the reigns of the entire system to a Biden regime. That would be suicide for the country. It's like waiting to save someone from suicide after they pulled the trigger and hoping you have enough time to push them out of the bullet's path.

▼ There's a time and a place to do what needs to be done. 1/20/21 is too late. I also don't think DC would be the place without a lot of prior planning. Make sure that planning includes not hurting innocent people.

▼ Then organize with people who are ready, willing, and able to fight instead of dropping that bomb on the hundreds of thousands of everyday people who showed up unarmed and unprepared for a fucking war, for what they were told was a protest, who are on the same side as you. The 6th isn't your only opportunity. You don't win by blindsiding your own people. Unless you're a muslim, in which case you likely don't give a fuck if you hurt/kill some of your own.

▼you can listen to insider knowledge if you stop dooming for five minutes. If all Trump wanted was a civil war, why is his legal team actively saying "republicans run XYZ in contested states, we do not want a war with Republicans, we have promising cases, we have many legal paths before we decide to implement the insurrection act". Because you're not paying attention to anything they're saying doesn't mean they've given up and all hope is lost. It's like no one pays attention. Not a single person on trump's team has hinted at wanting a civil war.

The 6th isn't our only day to act ya dip. It's a fucking stupid day to act because the people showing up armed to the teeth looking for a civil war are the minority. Most people are just going to protest. You're jeopardizing the safety of YOUR OWN people and because it isn't close to over yet, you're going to fuck over trump's chance of keeping the presidency by doing something that stupid at the most inopportune time when you're surrounded by innocents. That's the kind of shit that terrorists do. When it gets closer to the 20th and no progress has been made, organize with your buddies/people who WANT to fight, create a strategy, and do it so that there is little-no collateral damage. Our forefathers didn't force unknowing women/children/elderly to be out on the battlefield with them.

▼ You misspelled winning lol

We won. Easily.

There is a saying about this from I believe the first American revolution.

"Don't go off half cocked" I think is how it goes. Muskets of the day had the ability to pull back the hammer half way as it was a pretty tough mechanism as I understand it. Never fired one. So as it goes, having the hammer half cocked can lead to discharging the weapon easily while say your positioning with your troops, where (aside from friendly fire) the shot will cause those around you to possibly fire their weapons. In those times the assault muskets only loaded and fired one shot at a time. So after mistakenly firing off your ammunition, you are left in disarray and defenseless until you are able to reload (a skilled soldier could manage 2-3 shot per minute I think)

So don't go off with half a dick and get a BUNCH of people killed. Also don't take any shit from anyone. It's a game of finesse

▼ According to OP people should wait until Biden is inaugurated....umm at that point there's 0% chance for us. I'm not making a judgement call on the 6th one way or another but to say wait until after the 20th if things don't go out way (I.e. Biden's inaugurated) is flat out retarded.

▼ Exactly, after Biden is sworn in, taking that kind of action would make you guilty of sedition, as Biden would be, (even though we know its bullshit) the duly elected President, and you better believe they will come for you.

If we take action before, then if some prosecutor still tried to charge people for federal crimes, Trump can pardon anyone accused of anything federal related.

▼ Lmao it's not the 6th or never. You can plan a civil war for 11am on the 20th, when it's pretty clear Biden is going to be inaugurated and you're not going to derail any plans Trump has. And, bonus! You can start planning now, with people who are armed and willing to fight that you can strategize and organize with, instead of springing it on people and forcing them to take part when they have zero experience, zero defense, and zero prior knowledge it was happening.

What war has ever been won when you spring it unsuspectingly on your side, when you've got families and women and children running around? They even organized and strategized during the first civil war. They didn't start their opening battle by surprising their OWN PEOPLE with a war they had no prior knowledge was going to happen, with no plans, nothing to defend themselves with. I am surprised so many people do not see how utterly fucking stupid this is.

▼ Not starting a civil war before this is over is not backpedaling. The 6th is not the end of the line. It's no more the end of the line than the 14th was, and we blew past that already. Starting something like this on the 6th before any litigation has finished, when they still have legal paths they're actively taking, is fucking stupid. I don't want to live in a commie shithole either, but starting a civil war before it's over is going to do nothing but cause more problems. Don't get Trump fucked over because you're impatient. When Biden is certified as president or it's the 19th and nothing more can be done, then I'll be standing right next to you. If Trump is our only saving grace, we need to let him try and not get in his way with something so utterly stupid. Right now, we have a chance. If you start a civil war on the 6th before this is even over, you are taking that chance from EVERYONE.

You'd probably realize that if you took a break from larping on the donald. It's advertised as a protest, not a civil war. Trump is totally gonna fuckin dunk on biden when four people from the donald thought it was a good idea to instigate a civil war when the only people surrounding them are average americans holding "stop the steal" signs, all the while justifying it by saying "well trump said it'd be wild so obviously he was calling us for war 🤡"

Learn some fucking critical thinking skills. A majority of the people attending are not going to be of the belief that this kicks off the next civil war, rolling up with guns blazing. They're going to think it's like any other protest, because that's what they were told it is. Anyone with a brain that's not muslim would be horrified at the thought of blindsiding and forcing people from your own side into some kind of battle when they have zero warning/preparation and have no means of protecting themselves.

Instead of hijacking trump's protest with your piss-poor planning, organize at a later time with people who are ready, willing, and able instead of running into it blindly and assuming the mom with her 2 year old in a stroller

Are you people under the assumption every person in attendance acknowledges this may turn into a war and they are ready to put their life on the line six hours from then when we find out the results? You do realize most people believe this is like any other rally...right? And those people are also trump supporters...right?

▼ Right, and the ordinary understanding of "protest" here would be marching, holding signs, having speeches, shouting slogans, etc. The burden of proof is on those who claim that Trump is secretly summoning people to a gunfight using code words.

The stupidity of the Q-lade drinkers is off the charts.

▼ They are not words of hate, but of tough love. I'm terrified that a few naive but good people of high patriotism but low IQ are actually going to walk into DC with AR-15s. Then they will be arrested and go to prison for 10 years.

I am angry in advance of the (probably) 13-year-old keyboard warriors who are putting naive people up to that kind of unnecessary stunt.

If we just do exactly what President Trump asked us to do, we will be fine. It's the Q-lade drinkers who are reading between the lines and forming militias without a plan and without a leadership structure. That is absolutely unconscionable.

▼ hmmm... I dunno.

D.C.'s gun laws are restrictive but the thing is, sometimes people just say fuck it! They have had enough and this is the hill they are willing to fight potentially die on. I wouldn't suggest it, in fact I think it would be counter productive, but I see it as a natural reaction to the level of violence that ANTIFA was allowed to get away with.

How long should we tolerate terrorism while remaining calm and failing to adequately defend ourselves? ANTIFA is terrorism that has been enabled and supported by officialdom. So, at what point does officialdom lose relevance and people take up arms?

Look at people's reactions, its getting close and while we can agree that it's not a desirable state of affaires, perhaps it is what is needed.

All gun owners that I know are fully aware of the laws and none of them would take an action like this without fully evaluating the risks. If people do show up armed, it will not be because "13-year-old keyboard warriors who are putting naive people up to that kind of unnecessary stunt." rather it will be very serious people willing to go to jail, or discharge their weapon, based on the conviction of their beliefs.

There are hundreds of thousands of people attending what they believe is a protest, not a war. That means they're not carrying, they're not expecting this to be an event that'll be written in history books.

When you're going into it with the intentions of instigating a civil war without giving a fuck if your peers-ya know, the same like-minded individuals who are there for the same cause-have no warning or means of protecting themselves, putting them at risk, how is that noble?

The 6th is not the fucking last day to do anything. Maybe pay attention to what's going on before shitting your pants and thinking we have no other options. Reach out to people, organize, strategize, start the civil war if you're dooming your brains out. No one knows what TRUMP means. The brave persons posting here, willing to go to 20 degree weather on their own dime, don't know what to expect, we are preparing for various scenarios.

Since you know what TRUMP thinks please get a formal statement and post it here.

The last outcome anybody wants is for brave persons that are posting here to get stabbed, killed, or anything else. Brave persons posting here have fought all over the world, for other countries. We know our freedoms at home are at stake and we are willing to fight for it. Get us your memo on what President TRUMP means re: January 6th please and post it, so we can all know it.

It's not a mystery unless you have drunk the Q-lade. As far as we know, President Trump meant exactly what he wrote in his tweet, no more and no less. If you take it at bare face value, then patriots will show up in large numbers. There will be signs, speeches, and shouted slogans. Turning it into a 2nd Amendment protest or violently storming the US Senate building with guns IS NOT PART OF THAT PICTURE.

Not sure why OP thinks people are bringing weapons to start a civil war vs prevent one and be able to defend themselves from antifa.

Based on OPs logic we should wait till Biden is elected then that's the perfect time to ACTUALLY show up in force, dumb. It's going to be a huge protest if people didnt realize already that protests can be dangerous from the last maga million march then idk what to tell you.

▼ "Making this assumption and acting out on it is very, very, very stupid and very, very, very dangerous."

No. Not acting before they have control of the military and the nukes on January 20th is very, very, very stupid and very, very, very dangerous.

The 20th is not an option for the above reason.

They are daily making it more clear that they do not think they will be held accountable for addressing evidence of massive fraud across the country because they CCP influenced corruption is so deep that they will not lose their control. The 6th is their last chance for peacefully allowing Trump to retain control of what he rightfully won with the election. Frankly, the 6th is the only thing preventing open warfare at this point. I assure you, we have had plenty of time to consider our options and see them gradually be erased one at a time.

It does not matter if Trump says this word or that. This is not about what his call says and frankly this is much, much bigger than Trump. Either we the people elected our government or the election was stolen from us. Either we are paying taxes to people representing our decisions or we are paying tribute to those who have enslaved us. If our government is no longer elected by us, it no longer represents us and therefore "They still have legal routes to take, and will pursue those.... they hope to overturn the election through their legal paths" is meaningless. Their laws are no longer our laws because they have become pawns of foreign slave-masters rather than our legitimately elected representatives. No taxation without representation is what this country was founded on and it is why Congress needs to do the right thing on the 6th.

If they do not, this country will see bloodshed that will make the previous civil and revolutionary wars pale in comparison. Now there are private citizens that own aircraft, tanks, hand held machine guns and rocket launchers, and a myriad of other weapons. The threat won't come from the "twig-armed leftists that beat people with bike locks". It will come from the American civilians that own 45% of the world's firearms and be directed at the CCP pawns who sold them out. Moreover, it will come from the military struggling to keep their NBC weapons and facilities out of the hands of an angry and heavily armed populace that does not want their opponents to get them before they do. Before you say "US citizens will never take on the US military because they have nuclear weapons" etc., nuclear weapons are only an effective threat when the enemy is far away from you. Also there are over 150 trump supporters who think the election was stolen from them for every single active duty military member and guess what, most of the active duty military are also trump supporters.

All war is a terrible idea. But when others bring it on us, our only choice is to fight or die. I hope we never have to make that choice.

One way or another, Congress will make that decision for all of us on the 6th. I hope it is not the last decision they make.
